

Wedding ceremony costs:

A wedding in this beautiful 18th century oval church is a very special ceremony. Situated in George Street, the church was built for the New Town of Edinburgh and has a fine organ and a peal of 8 bells, the oldest in Scotland dating from 1788. It is within walking distance of hotels, restaurants, halls and both public and private gardens.

The minister will meet several times with the couple to discuss the subject of marriage and help to plan the ceremony. The minister is solely responsible for agreeing to allow the couple to be married in the church.

Basic Packages:

For the use of the church including heating and lighting (without music) £440

For the use of the Undercroft Chapel as above £240

Other facilities provided by the church:

The Director of Music to meet with the couple and choose music, to arrange for and play music before, during and after the service £195

The choir of professional standard (4 parts), leads the singing and provides music before and during the service (the signing of the register). £335

Additional organist to play and accompany the choir, when conducted by Director of Music £145

8 bells rung by bell ringers as the bridal party arrive and/or leave the church. This should be paid, in cash, at the wedding rehearsal. £335

A professional singer or instrumentalist to sing during the signing of the register £120

Fees for sound and video recording:

For sound recording only: music fee + 50%

For sound and visual recording: music fee + 100%

These fees are in accordance with those compiled by the Salaries Committee of the Scottish Federation of Organists and have been approved by the Music Committee of the Panel on Worship of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. Permission should be sought from the musicians involved before any recording takes place. The fee scale is designed to protect the performer's copyright.
